NATIVE OF INDIA
ADDRESSES OUTDOOR
CHURCH GATHERING

Many facts concerning India were told by Abad J. Appasamy, a native of that country, who spoke at a union meeting of the church organization held in the Court House park last evening.

Mr. Appasamy is a graduate of the college at Madras, India, also a graduate of the theological seminary of Hartford, and has the title of A. M. from Harvard. He is now taking a special course at the University of Wisconsin and has aspirations toward going to Oxford in England. He is fitting himself for missionary and literary work among his own people in India.

He presaged his talk by saying that America has been brought near to India by the wonderful part that she played in the world war. He also emphasized the thought that the country was undergoing a great period of transformation today, and that there were great opportunities for service at this time.

He noted several important things in connection with the country, some of them being the extensive area, and the large population of about 350 millions of people, only about four millions of them being Christians. There are 60 millions of Mohammedans, the most of any country in the world.

Most of the rest are Hindus, who believe, fervently, in their sacred books, the Vedas, in the transmigration of souls, in the caste system, and in idolatry. He gave interesting bits of facts concerning the daily life in India, which he said was carried on cheaply a domestic servant working daily for a month for a wage of $1 to $1.50.

The food, garments and occupations received attention, as well as some personal experiences pressed with a sort of quaint humor.

Rev. Raymond Pierson presided at the meeting and Rev. J. Hart Truesdale offered prayer. The men's chorus of the Methodist church sang several selections. The singing of "America" by the audience led by the choir closed the exercises.

Lighting the Trenches

During the recent war the world came into a full and complete understanding of the value of efficient and comprehensive organization on the part of big business.

One phase of the aid that the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) was able to render is interesting.

The U. S. Government called on the Company for candles, and in an incredibly short space of time the initial shipment was made.

In all, 285,000 candles were shipped from Whiting, Indiana, to France—about 85 candles for every man in the United States uniform.

The Standard Oil Company makes candles from the by-products of crude oil.

Besides serving a most useful and necessary purpose in themselves, the manufacture of candles enables the Company to keep down the manufacturing cost of gasoline, so that you may run your car without great expense for fuel.

This is only a single and minor phase of the part played by the Company in helping to win the war, but it serves to illustrate the usefulness of the Company as a public servant, and the benefits accruing to the world at large from Standard Oil Company (Indiana) operations.

Three Homely Tests Will Do for Sham Gasoline

It's easy to show up the rank inferiority of cracked motor fuels—its utter unfitness for your car. Try these simple tests.

TRY to evaporate a small quantity in an open saucer. The rank kerosene smell is evident at once and it leaves an oily residue that takes hours and days to dry up, whereas True Gasoline is clean gone, without a trace, in a matter of minutes.

YOUR wife will tell you that it is unfit even for cleaning as it does not dry, and it leaves gloves or fabrics reeking with kerosene and impregnated with dust-catching greasiness.

TRY it in a gasoline stove. Note the yellow, sputtering, reluctant flame compared with the quick gas and clean blue of True Gasoline.

Any chemist can carry the test further. He will tell you that it is not gasoline at all but a sickly substitute for it—inherently shy of the gasifying and combustible elements necessary to motor fitness, and overloaded with carbon, kerosene and heavier left-overs from the dirty dregs out of which it is made.

True Gasoline 30[¢] cents is the genuine, old-fashioned, "straight run" real gasoline—that is, the first that is taken from the crude petroleum. It brings no adulterants with it.

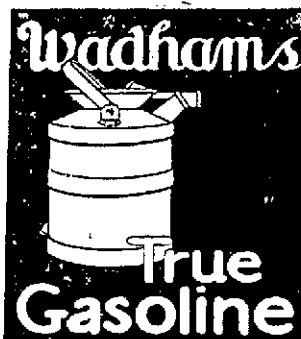

It gasifies and fires in every extreme of temperature; it explodes with a giant power-impulse; it yields greater mileage. It does not rack your motor with missing nor drag down your battery with hard starting. It has no carbon to cause knocking and clogging of your valves—no kerosene to thin your lubricating oil.

MCADOO'S BLUNDER.

The present wide discrepancy between the earnings needed by the railroads and the earnings actually being made is shown by the Railroad Age in its current issue to have been due to a very great under-estimate made by Director General McAdoo of the increase in operating expenses which was going to occur.
 Operating expenses are running at an annual rate of three-quarters of a billion dollars greater, according to the Railroad Age, than the estimate made by Mr. McAdoo a year ago.
 "When Director General McAdoo announced the advance of 25 percent in freight rates and 50 percent in passenger rates on May 25, 1918," the Railroad Age says, "it seems clear that the railroads should be made self-sustaining and that sufficient revenue should be provided to prevent them from becoming a burden on the public treasury. The immediate practical necessity is without delay that increases in rates should be made to provide for the increased costs of operation. In other words, the policy announced was that of making the rates and earnings high enough to cover all increases of expenses. Many persons, therefore, find it hard to understand why, in view of the advances in rates made at that time, the railways have fallen and are still falling so far short of earnings enough to pay their operating expenses and the guarantee returns to the railway companies.

"A review of the estimates of prospective expenses and of expenses actually incurred under government operation throws much light upon this matter, and is highly interesting. In his statement on May 25, 1918, Mr.
 McAdoo said, referring to the increases in expenses which were occurring: 'On account of these extraordinary increases in operating expenses which have come about as a consequence of the war, it is estimated that the operating expenses of the calendar year will be from $330,000,000 to $360,000,000 more than for the calendar year 1917.' His statement that the railroads should be made self-sustaining indicated that he believed the advances in rates he was about to make, and which were estimated at about a billion dollars a year, would be sufficient to cover all these increased expenses. But even at this time Mr.
 McAdoo had a very inadequate idea of the magnitude of the increases in expenses which were occurring, and were going to occur, because the actual total increase in 1918 was $1,160,000,000, or about $300,000,000 more than his maximum estimate.

As great, however, as was the increase in expenses in 1918, it is being far exceeded by the increase in 1919 over 1917, for many increases in wages and other operating costs which were made in 1918 did not begin to produce their full effect until 1919. The traffic which was handled in the first four months of 1919 was smaller than that handled in the first four months of 1917. The passenger business was larger, but the freight business was 12 1/2 percent less. On the other hand, while operating expenses in the first four months of 1917 were $330,000,000, in the first four months of 1919 they were $1,160,000,000, an increase of about 350 percent.
 If the increase in expenses throughout the year 1919 should be relatively as large as it was in the first four months—and it is safe to assume that it will be—the operating expenses of 1919 will exceed those of 1917 by $1,600,000,000. In other words, although the traffic being handled in 1919 is less than it was in either 1918 or 1917, operating expenses are running about $700,000,000 more than the estimated rate at which Mr. McAdoo made the big advances in freight and passenger rates a little over a year ago.

"When Director General Hines was testifying before the house committee on appropriations on June 4, he explained the great increase in expenses which had occurred by referring to the advances in wages and in the prices of materials and supplies which have taken place. He estimated the wages being paid in 1919 are 52 percent higher than the rates of pay in effect at the end of the calendar year 1917, and the prices of materials and supplies at 35 to 40 percent more than they were in 1917. He added:
 'How about the revenues? It is perfectly clear to me that a 25 percent increase in rates is not going to offset an increase of something over 50 percent in wages and anywhere from 35 to 40 percent in the cost of materials.'

Certainly, there is a very strong argument that could be made for the view that an increase in business cannot possibly produce enough additional net profit to make up for this loss of the purchasing power of the dollar.

"To state the matter in another way, you cannot offset an increase of at least $1,600,000,000 a year in expenses with an advance in rates which, even though the railroads were handling a maximum business, would yield only $1,000,000,000 to $1,200,000,000 in additional revenue. And, unfortunately, they are not handling a maximum business. Mr. McAdoo simply underestimated the increase of expenses that was going to occur as a result of the policies he initiated and the difference has now got to be made up.
 Many of the things done under government operation which caused this prodigious increase of expenses can never be undone, regardless of whether it would be theoretically right and desirable to undo them or not. The bulk of the increase in expenses is due to the advances in wages, and these will never be undone. Furthermore, there is no present prospect of substantial reduction of the prices of materials and supplies. A return to private operation of railroads is desirable mainly, not because of things done under government operation which will be undone—although many things will be undone—but because of the things which would be done in the future under government operation and which it behooves the country to avoid."

LET'S FIND OUT.

The five big packers have been accused of attempting to dominate control of the food of this nation. The federal trade commission is the cause. There must be some basis for the accusation. It is true that something that will bring the price of foodstuffs down. Investigations are all right if they go far enough. The trouble with most of those which have been made by federal commission is that after the investigation is made nothing is done to curb any evils that may have been found to exist.

If the packers or any other combination of men who control food or attempt to control food are a menace to the comfort and safety of the public, it is the duty of the officials of the government to set into motion the necessary machinery to stop it. If it has not the machinery, let it build it through legislation.

The people who have to buy the food should have some consideration.
 They have patriotically aided in winning the war. They have done so at the sacrifice of comforts. It is their right to reap some of the benefits of the prosperity. However, instead of being allowed to catch up, as it were, the prices of foodstuffs are edged up a notch or two. It is the one of the pictures of a man who had an eye of a stick that held the nose, but the stick that held the nose and the corn was kept just many miles to get it.

The United States department of agriculture in a recent report declares: "With meat prices to the public, and with the prices for live stock, especially beef and lamb, so low to the producer that he is actually losing money, the nation is confronted with a grave problem which requires solution if we are not to suffer a decline in the live stock industry."

This would indicate that someone is getting huge profits. It is time the government ascertained who these profiteers are. After an investigation is made, drastic steps should be taken to put those who are imposing upon the public out of business for all time.

TWO-STORY UTRECHT
 The atmosphere of the Netherlands has so pleased the ex-emperor of Germany that it is understood that he will take up permanent residence near Utrecht which is in the same province as his present home, Amerongen.

The Dutch town of Utrecht has become a shelter for the ex-emperor, and under very different circumstances than at one time it was a part of French Lorraine, after which it was taken by Germany and was long ruled by German emperors as a place of residence.

Before this period of its history
 Utrecht was a great cathedral town.
 Its cathedral, built in the twelfth century, lasted only until 1574, when a hurricane struck it, tore away the roof and the tower and left the tower and choir intact, but separated by the space of a square, and so they stand today with trolley cars and traffic rushing about between tower and choir and a market place installed in the very shadow of the ancient tower.
 Since the decline of Utrecht as a center of church influence, the Bishop's Palace has become a college and other symbols of churchly pomp are put to uses as incongruous.

Aside from its landmarks of church history, Utrecht boasts a university, shaded avenues and streets of white houses, and a fashionably modern life different from any others in Holland.

Most Dutch canals are laid nearly on a level with the streets, but in Utrecht the old canal and new canal are so far below the street level that they are bordered by a two-layer arrangement of houses and shops—on the main street and the other built in the basement of the main street canal. The two stories of the street connect by stairs at intervals along the canal bank.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

Now let the lesson be learned.
 That the tyrant has taught,
 Power is a joy to be earned.
 He that would rule or would lead Must triumph by right.
 Broken forever the creed
 Which glorifies might.

Gaze on the German despair!
 Look at the wreck of their dreams!
 Gone are their old glory gleams!
 Faintly their old glory gleams!
 Can you behold this and doubt
 Of the error of might as a creed?
 Here was force, cruel and stout!
 What more than this do you need?

This was the land of the Hun.
 Built and fashioned for lust;
 Thought was each dutiful son That the whim of the tyrant was just.

Never was mention of right
 Made in their churches and schools;
 There was a worship of might,
 Might and the monarch who rules.

Bright were the swords of their greed,
 Heavy the guns of their hate;
 Never an unworthy deed
 Had weapons so cruel and great.
 Never by force so strong
 Were right and its honor assailed;
 Might was massed there for a wrong
 At the peak of its power, and it failed!

Now let the lesson be learned,
 Teach it anew to your youth.
 Power is a joy to be earned,
 Evil must bow to the truth,
 Force, be it ever so strong, Cannot conquer the soldiers of right;
 The sword that is drawn for a wrong
 Shall ever go down in the fight.

The Gazette maintains an information bureau at Washington, D. C., under the direction of Frederic J. Has-kin. Questions will be answered on any subject. Those desiring information write a letter to the Janesville Daily Gazette Information Bureau, Washington, D. C., and enclose a stamp. The letter will be answered by our bureau.

Q. Where did the War Savings Stamp idea originate? W. E. B.
 A. The U. S. borrowed this idea from the British, who already had it in operation at the time we entered the war.

Q. What is the origin of the term
 "Anzac"? C. B. D.
 A. This word is taken from the first letter of Australia, New Zealand, Africa, and Canada, and thus indicates the British colonial troops.

Q. What states have laws making inter-marriage between whites and negroes a crime? B. D.
 A. Such a marriage is prohibited in the following states: Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, California, Colorado, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Indiana, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Mississippi, Missouri, Nebraska, North Carolina, Oklahoma, Oregon,
 South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Virginia and West Virginia.

Q. Of all the stars which is the brightest? S. R.
 A. The brightest star is Sirius.
 Altair and Cassiopeia are other bright stars. Venus is the brightest of the planets with Mars, Jupiter and Saturn following.

Q. Have astronomers maps of the moon's surface? C. B. G.
 A. No maps have ever been made of the entire surface of the moon as four-tenths of it always remains invisible to the earth.

Q. In what Episcopal church has Sec. Newton D. Baker ever been a vestryman or member? A. E.
 A. Sec. Newton D. Baker was a vestryman and a member of the Episcopal church in Martinsburg, West to Cleveland, O.

Q. What is the average working life of a woman stenographer? F. S.
 A. A recent investigation of the length of time a woman stenographer works at it fixed the time at about three years.

Q. Now that the war is over is one supposed to stand for the Star Spun-ned Banner? T. L. M.
 A. Yes. One is expected not only to stand, but to stand it, attention—upright and still with his hands at his sides. To move about, to stretch, to lean on the back of a seat, is but a little less discourteous, to the national anthem than to remain seated.

Q. Are flying machines to be used for patrolling forests for the prevention of fires? G. H. J.
 A. The army flying field at San Diego is this year co-operating with the forest service in acting as fire lookouts.

Q. Do oysters yield pearls? T. N. F.
 A. Pearls of values are never produced from oysters. They come from the pearl clam, a valve as big as a dinner plate.

Q. What is the highest price ever paid for a dog? B. M.

 A. As far as we are able to ascertain, the bird dog, Cenguard, owned by Tom Lawton, Egypt, Mass., brought the maximum price. Mr.
 Lawton paid $18,000 for Cenguard.
 Dr. Sylvester Judger, Congessman, C. is the owner of a bull dog for which he paid $8,500.

Q. Has a method been devised for eliminating the pucker from the per-scription? E. D.
 Yes. The department of agriculture has found that the perscription sealed in an air-tight case, loses the acid which causes it to pucker the mouth when eaten.

JAPANESE INVASION

ALARMING ENGLAND
 London.—If Japanese imports continue to come in as they are coming now, the English silk industry, which supports 20,000 to 30,000 people, is going to be wiped out," says J. R.
 Roper, a member of parliament from a silk industry center. He said that since pre-war days Japanese silk imports have increased from five million to twenty-five million dollars annually.
 Cane labor enables Japan to ship her silk to England and sell it at a lower price, he said.

Geneva.—The Alps were crossed for the first time, Saturday, by a hydro airplane piloted by Taddiol, a Swiss aviator.

Doctor Tells How to Detect Harmful Effects of Tobacco

Try These SIMPLE TESTS

New York: Doctor Connor, formerly of Johns Hopkins hospital, says:
 "Many men who smoke, chew or snuff incessantly and who are seemingly healthy are suffering from progressive organic ailments. Thousands of them would never have been afflicted had it not been for the use of tobacco."
 The chief habit forming principle of tobacco is nicotine, a deadly poison which, when absorbed by the system slowly affects the nerves, membranes, tissues and vital organs of the body.
 The harmful effect of tobacco varies and depends on circumstances. One will be afflicted with general debility, loss of vitality, loss of energy, loss of vigor, loss of strength, loss of manliness, loss of courage, loss of self-confidence, loss of initiative, loss of

SIGN TO-DAY
Your Building Contract

WE NEED houses, apartments, stores, schools and public buildings in this city and we need them at once! We're suffering without them.

Women are trudging the streets day after day, looking for a place to live at any price—and they can't find it. Real estate offices and rental agencies throw their hands in the air—"There's nothing listed," they say. "What can we do?"

Unless we begin to build in this city at once, this is going to be an undesirable place to locate. We'll drive business away. We'll all feel it.

SINCE the armistice was signed, everyone has waited for building prices to slump—they've settled a little, and now they're stabilizing probably for years to come. They're not high in comparison with other prices—they'll hold for years.

Every week the business condition of the nation grows more strained—bankers tell us to get our money into circulation or we'll have stagnation. The Government says we must start to build and buy at once.

Big rentals and demand for improved property makes building profitable just now. Let's get co-operation. You help the other fellow and he'll help you. The nation needs business, the city needs buildings, industry pleads for contracts. Your building project is the keystone. Start today!

Build Now! Repair Now! Paint Now! Buy Now!

Heart and Home Problems

LETTERS MAY BE ADDRESSED TO MRS. THOMPSON, IN CARE OF THE GAZETTE

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have been going with a young man for a year and a half. Most of the time he was overseas. He has returned home now and we have had a misunderstanding in which I broke our secret engagement. He refused to take his ring back and I am at a loss to know how I will return it.

He writes to me often, but I never answer. He wants to come back, but I do not want him. I go out with different fellows and always have a good time, but I am always thinking of my sweetheart.

Would be very grateful for your good advice. R. R. You have false pride. Your love for the young man should be great enough to overcome your stubbornness. Write to him and say that you value his friendship and he may come back. Accept him as a friend at first and if you find you and he are congenial, become engaged later.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Would a girl be any less thought of if she does not wear an engagement ring? D. J. Not all girls have an engagement ring. There is the question of money involved. Some girls prefer to wear their diamonds without an engagement ring. There is the question of money too. Some young couples think that they can make better use of their money if they do not buy the ring. I do not believe the girl should encourage her fiancé not to buy the ring. He is apt to look upon the ring as a sign of her love and if he does not realize what a great event it is to her and how much she wants it.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Would you please tell me what would be proper to wear when putting up at a hotel for a few days? I am going to stay for the morning, afternoon and evening. DOUBTFUL. Wear whatever you want to when stopping at a hotel. A suit is probably more popular than anything else.

A CHANCE TO LIVE

BY ZOE BECKLEY

THE DAY IS SET. Janie made good her promise by flying colors at thirteen and a half. Annie saw to it that Janie had the white frock and sash, the armful of roses, and the gold chain which she had hoped at her own graduation and through the tragedy of her father's death had missed.

Then came the trade school, and Janie took to it like a duckling to a brook.

Only a little while now," Annie would whisper to Aunt Margaret. "If only Bernie doesn't get worn out with waiting—and then what?"

"He won't, dear," Aunt Maggie always answered. "But sometimes she had to force confidence into her voice."

Margaret finally was not a deep thinker along scientific lines, but she often found herself musing on the curious economic viewpoint of a state that spent millions annually on rescue homes and reform schools for children who were filled with boys and girls who "fell" through lack of earning ability. She wondered why some of the millions were not spent at the other end of the business, where the reform schools, the trade schools, the factory training schools, the bridging over to be done at the expense of a sister's happiness and marriage and motherhood. It was all a puzzle and a puzzle.

But time wore on as it has a way of doing despite worries and disappointments, setbacks and toil. Janie was "going on" and she had made a hundred million sacrifices was ready at last for earning. She knew how to sew, and she knew it thoroughly and in a specialized way. She would never have to start at a factory machine for six dollars a week. She was going to enter a wholesale millinery house and get ten dollars to start.

"Now will her father be disappointed," Annie had noticed hidden in Bernie's coal lapel. For answer Bernie kissed her. But after the long, long wait there seemed just a single less romance in his attitude, just a shade of something missing. The zenith of the arc had been passed, that was all.

HEALTH TALKS

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D. LETTERS MAY BE RETURNED TO DR. BRADY, IN CARE OF THE GAZETTE

LET'S GO. An old work horse will stay in harness the longer for an occasional spell in the pasture.

X was a big, healthy man with an important job. At least folks considered him healthy. He had such vigor and endurance, working week days and Sundays with never a holiday, because he was tied to his business.

Yet sometimes X felt strangely tired for a time. He devoted only 14 hours a day to business 365 days a year, and now and then he dropped in to see the doctor and just get "a good tonic." Whatever that may be, the doctor, an unimpeachable man, measured X's b. p.—for X presented to the doctor's critical inspection (a) a high stomach, (b) the rosy cheeks, (c) a high blood pressure, and (d) everything we need not mention which suggested nothing normal to the doctor.

Under protest X removed his b. p. for a few days. All right. All right. Nevertheless the doctor C. V. D. The systolic pressure was 140 mm. which was bad—but the diastolic pressure was 102 mm. with which was good. It signified an overload on X's heart even when X imagined he was resting. A heart overloaded all the time tired out eventually.

So the doctor did not let him. He was frayed enough with X. He told the man that unless he shortened his days his days would be shortened for him. He prescribed for him a good rest, day to hours of open air recreation or play or amusement, at least two days away from work out of every month.

But X could not. So the doctor appealed to Mrs. X. He urged her to make her husband buy an automobile and tinker with it and take her for long rides every day. (Poor thing, she needed the air too.) But Mrs. X could not. Why, they couldn't afford it! How could X leave his business that way?

X owned half a dozen well-ventilated residences in town and a good farm in the country. You see he was a poor man and had to keep his nose on the grindstone. His wife was a poor woman, too—a poor specimen. X's work simply could not be neglected—right there.

Within two years X went to the talismans—slow heart muscle failure—heart, red out, but X never mind. Work has been neglected considerably ever since.

he such a fine, healthy, strong, vigorous man only 44 years old.

Some good doctors might say that overwork killed X.

Well, that is one way of expressing it. What X needed was a little gardening every day, or digging postholes, or carpentry, or something like that, even golf. Any of these changes is as good as a rest.

But X preferred a nice long rest. He didn't believe in half holidays and such like. When X did anything he did it thoroughly.

The short-sighted Xs. Let's be Xs. It is a generally accepted belief that an eighteen-year-old problem. Please tell me what is considered the ideal weight for a healthy eighteen-year-old man? (G. A. T.)

ANSWER—The weight varies with stature. Multiply the height in inches by two, and that will give approximately the normal weight for girls from sixteen to twenty. Empirical on the face are never a sign of impure blood—whatever impure blood may be.

A Young Man's Purking Buttermilk. I eat Graham bread, bran mush for breakfast, fruit, cereals, etc., no meat, tea, or coffee at all. I am now in my eight years old. Allow me to ask: Is the effect of the use of buttermilk to reduce acidity of the urine and blood as good when the buttermilk is three or four days old as when it is fresh? G. A. T.

ANSWER—Yes. And accept my congratulations, sir, for not saying that you are eighty years young.

HAVE THEM ALREADY. Suffered from it. What do you women should have men's wages? Hubby—Well, they do, don't they? You get mine.

FLANNEL OUTFIT FOR THE GOLFER

BY ELOISE.

Sport clothes will always be popular in this country because every year the number of women who take up the various outdoor games increases amazingly. These bright colored sweaters and skirts and the flannel shoes and hats may not be as universally worn in years to come as they have been during the past few seasons, but they will always be an essential part of the well-dressed woman's wardrobe. It will probably be bad taste in a few seasons to wear sport clothes for anything else but the purpose for which they were made, but no other garment will ever replace the white skirt and brilliant wrap and becoming tailored hat for tennis and golf and the like.

Here is a stunning outfit which would make any young person want to take up golfing just to be able to wear it. It is smart, simple and comfortable. The coat is a long, flared, striped with turquoise. It is made with an odd cape collar and a narrow sash belt. The skirt is white flannel made not too long and not too tight and trimmed with a row of pearl buttons down the side.

SHIRAZI DRESS. Elizabeth, N. J.—Miss Jane Byron, 51 years old, who claims to be the country's oldest newsagent, says that she has been married for 40 years. She is a shrewd business woman and her light skirts should be buried forever.

"I often wonder if our girls are more when I see some of our married women who ought to have better sense wearing such short skirts," she said. "I wonder that their husbands don't tell them to put on longer ones. And wash the paint from their cheeks. When I was a girl we didn't have to paint, for the red cheeks grew naturally, and as for shimmy dancing, land sakes alive!"

SIDE TALKS

—By— RUTH CAMERON

THE DIFFICULTY OF SAYING WHAT ONE MEANS.

Are you sometimes appalled by the difficulty of writing or saying exactly what you mean?

Theoretically it should be the simplest thing in the world. Ready at your hand lies the dictionary filled with some hundreds of thousands of words which surely should be capable of conveying the most minute shades of meaning. Of course you are not familiar with all these words, but you know some thousands and you could help yourself to more, if need be.

From feeling or thinking a thing to saying it ought to be just a single step dependent solely on one's volition. And yet, as a matter of fact, there often yawns a wide chasm between the two, which baffles all one's efforts to throw a bridge across it. And writing it is just about twice as hard as saying it. (I have just written that paragraph three times and it is not at all to my liking yet.)

I have been especially impressed by this truth lately by an experience with the author. I am a great student of faces and sometimes when I come home from a social evening or a trip to town, and tell what I have seen or felt, I find that I have seen he will ask me to describe it. The face is perfectly clear in my mind. I can speak of it with a good deal of fervor and vividness.

hot over tongue. Soft Gingerbread—One cup of molasses, one cup of brown sugar, one teaspoon soda, one-half cup shortening, one cup water, one teaspoon ground ginger, four cups flour, one teaspoon ground cinnamon.

Stir, molasses, sugar, shortening together in a pan and water warm in which the soda has been dissolved, then flour, salt spices sifted together, beat hard. Bake in a well greased pan in moderate oven about one-half hour.

Jack and the girl of course said no, and the king breath said: "Were there really truly robbers?"

with her husband's step-brother-in-law. But she, not a whit decomposed when the Count obtained a separation, and having lost the step-brother-in-law overboard on the voyage across the channel, gave the Marquis DeBore one wondrous glance, and he was a gentler that instant.

At last, unable to bear Pappeck's flirtations any longer, the Marquis spirited her away to the desert whither "no man's foot doth tread," and here is where the Arab comes in.

Little did the Marquis know that with women, where there's a will, there's a way. And thinking he had her far from the sex, it is with a feeling of relief that he goes sand-slipping out into the desert.

While he is gone, the Arab Nabob who had been their guide, falls violently in love with Pappeck, and she with him. So, leaving an old blue serge as a suit for divorce, she fled with the Arab.

When the Marquis returned, he read the note with fury and grabbed up his perfume-squitter—he would kill the bedouin bum, by allie!

And Pappeck, adorned by her dusky Arab, suffocated with incense, drowned in a tar of roses and greased with oils of Arabia, slips through his fingers, and expires with sweetness.

THE WISHING PLANE

BY WILLIS WINTER

When the children emerged from the castle the clouds had cleared away and the sun was shining on the roads and walks. They hurried out to the stables and asked Daddy Groom to saddle their ponies. Then they rode away down one of the gravel roadways.

They took a longer ride this time and found themselves later three or four miles down the road, where they had seen a group of children playing during their auto ride with the queen. They stopped to talk to the children for a while and then started back to the castle.

As they turned to go the father of one of the boys came around the house on horseback and said, "If you little folks are going back to the castle I will ride right along with you." The children were curious to know

"I am pretty sure there were," said the man. "At least, the king has asked some of his men round about here to help his guards watch the castle at night, because some one has been carrying away valuable silver and other things from the castle for the last few nights, and no trace of them has been found."

"Why didn't the king tell us all about it?" asked Jack. "I suppose he thought that the burglars would be caught before this and he was afraid you would be frightened if you knew that some one was prowling around at night," said the man.

Because they were so anxious to get to the castle and hear more about the robbers, it seemed like an awful long way back. When they did get there, they found a dozen or more men whom the king had called by telephone to the castle.

King Charles told how the usual guards around the castle at night had watched all the roads, but had failed to see anyone come or go. In each of the servants in the castle each morning reported more woods stolen.

The Magnificent Ambersons

By BOOTH TARKINGTON

This house was the pride of the town. Faced with stone as far back as the dining-room windows, it was a house of arches and turrets and girding stone porches; it had the first porte cochere seen in that town. There was a central "front hall" with a great black-walnut stairway, and open to a green glass skylight called the "dome," three stories above the ground floor. A ballroom occupied most of the third story, and at one end of it was carved a walnut gallery for the musicians. Citizens told strangers that the cost of all this black walnut and wood carving was sixty thousand dollars. "Sixty thousand dollars for the woodwork alone! Yes, sir, and hardwood floors all over the house! Turkish rugs and no carpets at all, except a Brussels carpet in the front parlor—I hear they call it the "reception room." Hot and cold water upstairs and down, and stationary washstands in every bedroom in the place! Their sideboard's built right into the house and goes all the way across one end of the dining room. Isn't walnut, it's solid mahogany! Not veneering—solid mahogany! Well, sir, I presume the president of the United States would be tickled to swap the White House for the new Amberson mansion, if the Major'd give him the chance—but by the Almighty Dollar, you bet your sweet life the Major wouldn't!"

The visitor to the town was certain to receive further enlightenment, for there was one form of entertainment never omitted: he was always patriotically taken for "a little drive round our city," even if his host had to hire a hack, and the climax of the display was the Amberson mansion. "Look at that greenhouse they've put up there in the side yard," the escort would continue. "And look at that brick stable! Most folks would think that stable plenty big enough and good enough to live in, it's got running water and four rooms upstairs for two hired men and one of 'em's family to live in. They keep one hired man to look after the stable, and they got a married hired man out in the stable, and his wife does the washing. This town never did see so much style as Ambersons are putting on these days; and I guess it's going to be expensive, because a lot of other folks'll try to keep up with 'em. The Major's wife and the daughter's been to Europe, and my wife tells me since they got back they make tea there every afternoon about five o'clock and drink it. Seems to me it would go against a person's stomach, just before supper like that, and anyway tea isn't fit for much—not unless you're sick or something. Looks to me like some people in this city'd be willing to go crazy if they thought that would help 'em to be as high-toned as Ambersons. Old Aleck Minafer—he's about the closest old coddler we got—he come in my office the other day, and he pre'y near had a stroke tellin' me about his daughter Fanny. Seems Miss Isabel Amberson's got some kind of a dog—they call it a St. Bernard—and Fanny was bound to have one, too. Well, old Aleck told her he didn't like dogs except rat terriers, because a rat terrier cleans up the mice, but she kept on at him, and finally he said all right she could have one. Then, by George! she says Amberson's bought their dog, and you don't get one without paying for it; they cost from fifty to a hundred dollars up! Old Aleck wanted to know if I ever heard of anybody's buyin' a dog before, because, even a Newfoundland or a setter, you can usually get somebody to give you one. He says he saw some sense in payin' a nigger a dime, or even a quarter, to drown a dog for you, but to pay out fifty dollars and maybe more—well, sir, he like to choked himself to death, right there in my office! Of course everybody realizes that Major Amberson is a fine business man, but what with throwin' money around for dogs, and every which and what, some think all this style's bound to break him up, if his family don't quit."

One citizen, having thus discoursed to a visitor, came to a thoughtful pause, and then added, "Does seem pretty much like squandering, yet when you see that dog out walking with this Miss Isabel, he seems worth the money."

"What's she look like?"

"Well, sir," said the citizen, "she's not more than just about eighteen or maybe nineteen years old, and I don't know as I know just who to put it—but she's kind of a delightful lookin' young lady!"

CHAPTER II.

Another citizen said an eloquent thing about Miss Isabel Amberson's looks. This was Mrs. Henry Franklin Foster, the foremost literary authority and intellectual leader of the community—for both the daily newspapers thus described Mrs. Foster when she founded the Women's Tennyson club; and her word upon art, letters and the drama was accepted more as law than as opinion. Naturally when "Hazel Kirke" finally reached town, after its long triumph in larger places, many people waited to hear what Mrs. Henry Franklin Foster thought of it before they felt warranted in expressing any estimate of the play. In fact, some of them waited in the lobby of the theater as they came out and formed an inquiring group about her.

"I didn't see the play," she informed them.

"What! Why, we saw you, right in the middle of the fourth row!"

"Yes," she said, smiling, "but I was sitting just behind Isabel Amberson. I couldn't look at anything except her wavy brown hair and the wonderful back of her neck."

The ineluctable young men of the town (they were all ineluctable) were unable to content themselves with the view that had so charmed Mrs. Henry Franklin Foster; they spent their time struggling to keep Miss Amberson's face turned toward them. She turned it most often, observers said, toward two: one, excelling in the general struggle by his sparkle, and the other by that winning if not winsome old trait, persistence. The sparkling gentleman "led germines" with her, and sent sonnets to her with his bouquets—sonnets lacking neither music nor wit. He was generous, poor, well-dressed, and his amazing persuasiveness was one reason why he was always in debt. No one doubted that he would be able to persuade Isabel, but he unfortunately joined too merry a party one night, and during a moonlight serenade upon the lawn before the Amberson mansion, was easily identified from the windows as the bass person who stepped through the bass viol and had to be assisted to a waiting carriage. One of Miss Amberson's brothers was among the serenaders, and when the party had dispersed remained propped against the front door in a state of helpless liveliness; the Major going down in a dressing gown and slippers to bring him in, and scolding mildly, while imperfectly concealing strong impulses to laughter. Miss Amberson also laughed at this brother the next day, but for the suitor it was a different matter: she refused to see him when he called to apologize. "You seem to care a great deal about bass viols!" he wrote her. "I promise never to break another!" She made no response to the note, unless it was an answer, two weeks later, when her engagement was announced. She took the persistent one, Wilbur Minafer, no breaker of bass viols or of hearts, no serenade at all.

A few people, who always foresaw everything, claimed that they were not surprised, because though Wilbur Minafer "might not be an Apollo, as it were," he was "a steady young business man and a good church goer," and Isabel Amberson was "pretty sensible—for such a showy girl." But the engagement astounded the young people, and most of their fathers and mothers too; and as a topic it supplanted literature at the next meeting of the "Women's Tennyson club."

"Wilbur Minafer!" a member cried, her infection seeming to imply that Wilbur's crime was explained by his surname. "Wilbur Minafer! It's the queerest thing I ever heard! To think of her taking Wilbur Minafer, just because a man any woman would like a thousand times better was a little wild one night at a serenade!"

"No, that wasn't her reason," said wise Mrs. Henry Franklin Foster. "If men only knew it—and it's a good thing they don't—a woman doesn't really care much about whether a man's wild or not, if it doesn't affect herself, and Isabel Amberson doesn't care a thing!"

"Mrs. Foster!"

"No, she doesn't. What she minds is his making a clown of himself in her front yard! It made her think he didn't care much about her. She's probably mistaken, but that's what she thinks, and it's too late for her to think anything else now, because she's going to be married right away—the invitations will be out next week. It'll be a big Amberson-style thing, raw oysters floating in scooped-out blocks of ice and a band from out of town—champagne, showy presents; a colossal present from the Major. Then Wilbur will take Isabel on the carefree little wedding trip he can manage, and she'll be a good wife to him, but they'll have the worst spoiled lot of children this town will ever see."

"How on earth do you make that out, Mrs. Foster?"

Dinner Stories

The woman driver brought her car into the service station. "My brakes don't seem to stop the car at all," she said. "I wish you would see if you can tell me what is the matter. I can push the pedal down as hard as I can, but the brakes don't work."

The service manager called a man and had him look at the brakes and he discovered a very common trouble—the owner had been neglecting to oil two small rods that act as a pivot for the brake mechanism. As a result they had rusted or "frozen" together solid. "Your brakes are frozen, Mrs. Jones," said the service manager. "If you will leave the car in the shop we can fix it up for you in an hour or so."

"My brakes are frozen up!" exclaimed the owner. "I can understand how the radiator can freeze in December, but I am utterly at a loss to understand how brakes can freeze in July!"

"Force of habit is a wonderful thing," said a Lewiston girl. "Now, my father smokes a pipe. Smokes a great deal, and when he is going away or anything his pipe is his first consideration. Some time ago there was a fire in the neighborhood in the middle of the night."

"Father was out of bed with the first stroke of the alarm and rushed downstairs. Mother and I were sitting on the porch. When we got downstairs we found father with a raincoat on over his nightdress, leaning as far out of the back door as he could, gazing wild-eyed at the black down the street."

"When he heard us enter he brought his head in long enough to exclaim: 'Great gosh, Alice, the Joneses' house is all afire and I can't find my pipe!'"
